

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH
Christine A. Stanley, Ph.D.

Christine A. Stanley is the Vice President and Associate Provost for Diversity and Professor of Higher Education in the College of Education and Human Development at Texas A&M University. She has served the University in a variety of senior administrative roles—as Acting Vice Provost for Academic Affairs from 2014-2015, Executive Associate Dean for Faculty Affairs in the College of Education and Human Development from 2006-2009, and Associate Dean of Faculties from 2003-2006.

She has served the University in a variety of key leadership capacities, which included Co-Chair of the TAMU NSF ADVANCE Scholar Program (2011-present), Chair of the Task Force on the Graduate Experience (2009-2010), and Co-Chair of the Teaching and Learning Roadmap Committee, one of three committees of the TAMU Academic Master Plan (2008-2009).

Dr. Stanley served on the presidential task force to develop and write the first Standards of Professional Practice for Chief Diversity Officers, commissioned by the National Association of Diversity Officers in Higher Education (NADOHE). This was published in the Journal of Diversity in Higher Education in 2014.

In her role as Vice President and Associate Provost for Diversity and with research expertise in diversity and faculty professional development, Dr. Stanley is primarily responsible for (1) assessing and monitoring the efforts and progress in diversifying the faculty, staff, and student bodies, (2) assisting the President and Provost in holding units accountable for progress in achieving diversity and promoting a supportive climate for diversity, and (3) planning and implementing programs to ensure diversity and equity among students, faculty, and staff by working with Vice Presidents, Deans, Department Heads, and the leadership of the faculty, student, and staff governing bodies.

Dr. Stanley is a Past President of the Professional and Organizational Development (POD) Network in Higher Education. Prior to joining the faculty at Texas A&M University, she was Associate Director of the Office of Faculty and TA Development at The Ohio State University where she received the Distinguished Staff Award in 1999. Dr. Stanley has edited 2 books (Faculty of Color: Teaching in Predominantly White Colleges and Universities and Engaging Large Classes), has over 40 publications, 51 refereed national conference presentations, and has consulted nationally and internationally with faculty and administrators on faculty development issues in the United States, Armenia, China, Mexico, and South Africa. She serves on numerous Journal Editorial Review Boards and has graduated 15 Ph.D. students and 7 Masters students. She teaches courses on college teaching, faculty professional development in higher education, and diversity and social justice in higher education.

She is the 2000-2001 recipient of Texas A&M University's College of Education Development Council's Outstanding New Faculty Award. In 2004, she received the Robert Pierleoni Spirit Award from the Professional and Organizational Development Network in Higher Education for her leadership efforts in diversity and faculty professional development. Her research interests are in faculty professional development, instructional development, multicultural organizational development, and college teaching.

Dr. Stanley is a native of Jamaica, The West Indies and holds a B.Sc. Degree in Biology (cum laude) from Prairie View A&M University, a M.Sc. Degree in Zoology from Texas A&M University, and a Ph.D. in Curriculum & Instruction from Texas A&M University.